How to avail single parent id

The Veteran's Administration (VA) announced their roll-out of new veteran's ID cards in November 2017, according to the VA website. Wondering how to get your veteran's ID card? Use this guide to learn more about who is eligible for the new card, reasons to apply and where to get it. What is the Veteran's ID Card Need to prove your veteran's status at businesses and local organizations? The new veteran's ID card is perfect proof of your military service. This new ID card, which was rolled out in late 2017, provides a secure, portable way to show that you met the minimum service requirements. Congress ordered this free ID card back in 2015 in the Veteran's Identifications Card Act of 2015 to give veterans another way of providing proof of their service without requiring them to carry their DD-214 forms, which are the reports issued after performing active duty or a minimum of 90 back-to-back days of active duty training. Who's Eligible for the Veteran's ID Card Before considering how to get your veteran's ID card, it helps to understand exactly who is eligible to apply. These ID cards were created specifically for all veterans who received an honorable discharge. They're separate from military ID cards, providing proof that the holder served the United States military honorably regardless of whether you retired from the military or not, as noted by the Military Wallet. Why Get The New Veteran's ID Card The purpose of having the veteran's ID card is to prove your status. It won't entitle you to any new benefits, but it will make it easier to score special perks, including retail discounts, premium parking spots and free meals on Veteran's Day, according to Military.com. Having the card could come in handy whenever you need to prove your military service record. It won't give you access to any new benefits, but if you're looking to get special benefits, free meals, primo parking spots or score discounts, having the veteran's ID card might be exactly what you need. Benefits of the Card There aren't any special benefits attached to this card and it won't give you access to anything new and exciting from the federal government. The ability to prove your military service and status as someone with an honorable discharge is one of the main reasons to get the new veteran's ID card. Being able to get additional perks open to veterans is another reason, as noted by Military.com. How to Get Your Veteran's ID Card Wondering how to get your veteran's ID card? It's easy when you follow a few simple steps: Visit the vets.gov website. You may need to add your email address to get onto the waiting list.Create an account on vets.gov, verify your identity, request a veteran's ID card and have an official ID card like a state or federal ID handyFill out the application, provide the identity verification requested and request your ID card. MORE FROM ASKMONEY.COM A parent in the Philippines who is solely raising his/her child should get a Solo Parent ID Card being issued by the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD). Caring for the children and providing their daily needs in almost every aspect of life is a very challenging responsibility of both parents. How much more if you are the only one raising your child. There are millions of single parents or solo parents in the country and the government is not pretending to be blind about this. The government recognized the need for assistance that's why they are implementing program of services, benefits and privileges for the solo parents under the Republic Act No. 8972, known as the "Solo Parents' Welfare Act of 2000." So you might ask, who are qualified as solo parents and eligible to get a Solo Parent ID Card? Well, there are several conditions written on the Act but to discuss it in simple terms, here are the categories which a person is considered as a solo parent: A woman who gave birth to a child even if the pregnancy is due to unwanted circumstances. A parent whose spouse passed away. A parent taking care of his children because the spouse is detained or in prison for at least 1 year. A parent raising his/her children alone because of the incapacity of the spouse. A parent left alone due to legal separation or abandonment of spouse for at least 1 year. Any person who provides the needs of children or any family member who takes care of the children in the absence of a parent due to death, abandonment or disappearance. Benefits of Having Solo Parent ID Card Some parents would say that one of the best benefits of having a Solo Parent ID Card is the "parental leave" in case the parent is working. The 7-day leave is granted to the holder of the solo parent ID given that he/she has rendered at least a year working in the company. Other privileges if you are a working parent is the flexible work schedule and no discrimination at work as this is an often issue while in the workplace. Moreover, to those solo parents with financial status falls below the poverty threshold determined by the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), may avail more benefits such as educational assistance in the form of scholarships, housing benefits with favorable payment scheme, medical assistance and more. Solo Parent ID Card Requirements Application Form - You can get and fill-up this form in the City or Municipal Social Welfare and Development Office in your locality.
